I see a moon flickering, brokenleaning against the sky, and afraid. I am a girl among men and women, boasting in beauty, but without a face. Their tongues are cut; I'm being ridiculed. Is there an end to these knives? I'm lying, I'm on the verge of twitching. I consist of scorched sea foam and fire. I'm like a tape with a ribbon. When will I be cast in the uttermostedge of the world? I wander through the woods, plunging through branches crammed with arrows, and feel uncomfortable. The night is full of beasts and spikes. All my senses are taut as the smell of violets skews me and beckons. I feel guilty and cold. Under the black I see moths, I translate flashing yellow lights hear nightingales. Blistered by his red melody, I reel. Darkness broke me. A crack in my body screams. It's an incredible place: depressing and red in its intensity. Every moment in this abolished worldis is unreal. The light glare of his hostilityand metallic flowers tremble with cold. I don't have a normal bodyhere; I've lost the look of the whole and only feela prickly emptiness. It's a painful place for my indifference, so I cutpeople open with a knife-blade to see a flash of their vibrations to see their preparation transformation. I knew there was extraordinary cruelty in cruelty. Share share on Facebook Share on Twitter Share on Google Plus recently acquired from the New York Public Library: Rare Materials by Virginia Woolff! I extended certain desires; I lost friends, some to death ... others because of the inability to cross the street. Virginia Woolf's effect of death on survivors is always strange, and often terrifying, as a result of the destruction of innocent desires. Virginia Woolf Is a Change of Soul. I don't believe in aging. I believe I'm going to change someone's appearance forever. Here's my optimism. Virginia Woolf If you don't tell the truth about yourself, you can't tell the truth about other people. Virginia Woolf thought how uncomfortable it was to be locked outside; and I thought how much worse maybe to be locked inside. Virginia Woolf This soul, or life within us, has no choice agrees with the outside life. If someone has the courage to ask her what she thinks, they always say the exact opposite of what other people say. Virginia Woolf The truth is that I always love women. I like their lack of convention. I like their honesty. I like their anonymity. Virginia Woolf Facing Life Ahead... Always... Face life ahead, and see it as it is... Finally, understand her and love her for what she... And then let it follow... Always years between us, always years ... I always love... Always the reason... Always time... Always... It's time.
